

“The steward whom his Lord cast out of his stewardship is nevertheless commended because he provided himself against the future. We ought not however to take the whole for our imitation. For we should never act deceitfully against our Lord in order that from the fraud itself we may give alms... On the other hand this parable is spoken that we should understand that if the steward who acted deceitfully could be praised by his lord, how much more they please God who do their works according to His commandment.”
